

South Wairarapa Vets – Tree Planting Day

The KPMG team headed over to Carterton to support our client South Wairarapa Vets (SWVets) with their tree planting day. SWVets is taking action on climate change and giving back to the community by planting hundreds of native trees to reduce our impact on the planet.

It was one of the coldest mornings of the year and the day presented a great opportunity to support a client, make a difference, and bond as a team – not to mention also use our annual volunteering day.

Our teams hung up their stethoscopes and picked up shovels as we pitched in to plant 5000 trees at the QEII covenant in Carterton. We had an amazing day planting thousands of native trees in Carterton. A wonderful turnout of people from a wide range of companies came to support us, including New Zealand Veterinary Association (NZVA) Chief Executive, Kevin Bryant.

Even though the weather was pretty rough, everyone rolled up their sleeves, threw on a coat, and slipped into their gumboots to get to work planting native seedlings. We were delighted with everyone's effort and raised $1290 through our Givealittle fundraising campaign along the way!

Thank you to everyone who came along to show their support. We are big believers in tackling the effects of climate change and taking steps to reduce our impact on the planet wherever possible in our work. This was a great initiative to help make a difference, bring the community together, and plant trees for future generations to enjoy.
