

KPMG is a Kennedy Vanguard Leader in HR Transformation Consulting

Recognized for strengths in ‘analytics capabilities and the Powered HR platform that leverages cloud technology to accelerate HR transformation.’

KPMG International member firms were cited as one of only two of the Kennedy “Vanguard Leaders” as “advancing” in the breadth and depth of Human Resources (HR) transformation capabilities in a leading analyst report. The report, by Kennedy Consulting Research & Advisory, highlighted the firm’s “series of strategic investments and a continued focus on innovation, KPMG has evolved its capabilities to help clients streamline and accelerate the process of transforming HR.”

The report spoke highly of KPMG’s “leadership position” in this market and has “advanced its position on the strength of its investment in analytics capabilities and the Powered HR platform that leverages cloud technology to accelerate HR transformation implementation while controlling costs.”

“We know from our work with hundreds of leading organizations around the world that HR transformation remains a top business priority for the C-suite, particularly in today’s rapidly changing and disruptive business environment. This placement in the Kennedy Vanguard further acknowledges that we have the proven methodologies, the expertise, and the bench strength globally to help these companies prevail with their complex challenges.”

KPMG Insights

The KPMG knowledge base of articles and publications demonstrates our understanding of the complex business challenges faced by companies around the world. Explore our thought leadership at KPMG Insights.

The report notes “Of Powered HR, a fully integrated, end-to-end HR transformation methodology that combines HR strategy, operations, and technology consulting in a cloud-enabled environment...provides KPMG’s intellectual property and assets for standardized HR operations on a preconfigured platform, allowing HR leadership to focus on the strategic elements of transformation. It also provides a backbone for global service delivery in Source, a collaboration environment for clients and their consultants to share methods and insights, model risk across multiple projects, and track activities.”

Additionally, KPMG has been recognized for having “advanced its thinking on building an evidence-based HR capability in research with The Economist Intelligence Unit that shows the connection between HR and business performance.” HR technology and data analytics are critical enablers of differentiated HR for their ability to deliver targeted evidence and insights into how people contribute to organizational success.

Citing expanded capabilities that have added to the organization’s success as a result of recent acquisitions like “KPMG’s acquisition of Towers Watson’s HR Service Delivery practice makes KPMG a global leader in Workday-based HR service delivery consulting. With this deal, KPMG also assumes ownership of Towers Watson’s renowned HR Service Delivery and Technology survey and forum, which will enhance its own brand credentials and domain leadership in HR transformation.” (KPMG acquired US-based Axia Consulting’s Workday practice in August 2014.)

“Cited for having advanced its thinking in building an evidence-based HR capability in research...that shows the connection between HR and business performance.”
