

Trinidad and Tobago 2022 Mid-Year Budget Review

Introduction

In a welcomed contrast to other recent mid-year budget review presentations, the Honourable Minister of Finance, Mr. Colm Imbert, hailed “GOOD NEWS” for Trinidad and Tobago’s economy. Buoyed by rising energy prices and to a lesser extent, increased economic activity from the relaxation of COVID-19 restrictions, fiscal revenues for the last six months were elevated beyond the expectations of the initial targets set in October 2021. The actual budget surplus of TT $1.98 billion reported at the end of April 2022, against the expected TT $5.7 billion deficit, is a symbol that the country is experiencing a turn of its economic tide, away from ballooning public debt.

Expenditure-wise, a further TT $3.081 billion is needed, mainly to clear various arrears accrued by state enterprises and other arms of government, increase payments of VAT refunds to registered taxpayers, reduce public debt and make good on compensation owed to public servants and independent contractors of the state.

The increased cashflow, to be made available to the nation’s utility bodies, by the settlement of arrears, can assist with necessary repairs and minor upgrades of water and electricity infrastructure, which have all contributed to public displeasure. We are of the view however, that high recurrent expenditure in areas such as salaries and wages may be a threat to utility improvement in the short term and should therefore be continually monitored.

Payment of further VAT refunds, owed to registered persons will boost the cashflow available to producers and retailers who continue to deal with inflated transportation, costs of materials and other inputs. Noting reports of several business closures around the country, it is hoped that the supplemental cash payout in the form of VAT refunds can be used to keep thin-margined operators afloat and their employees on payroll as the country navigates its recovery.

The use of the energy windfall for debt servicing, particularly in the context of the unpredictable COVID-19 pandemic and the ongoing war in Ukraine, is a noteworthy effort to unlock the fiscal space needed to confront unfortunate eventualities. The Honourable Minister also boasted that no borrowing was required in the five months leading up to the mid-year review presentation. While this is commendable and points in the right direction of fiscal prudence, the borrowings from the next generation through the Heritage and Stabilization Fund (HSF) in past fiscal years must not be forgotten. Therefore, the announcement that the government would be able to contribute to the HSF is applauded.

According to the Central Statistical Office (CSO), the inflation rate for March 2022, compared to March 2021, was 4% and several reports forecast global inflation to remain at least until the end of the current year. The initiative announced to utilize some of the excess petroleum revenues to stabilize the price of LPG or cooking gas will therefore provide some relief. It surely can be appreciated that the government has exhausted expenditure capabilities from previous COVID-19 prevention efforts, which narrows the possibility for further intervention on this front.

In closing, it would be difficult to not adopt an optimistic view from the Honourable Minister’s mid-year review presentation. Government revenues are on the upswing and public debt is being suppressed, which are noteworthy results. Notwithstanding the storm of the past two fiscal cycles, Trinidad and Tobago remains afloat. Continuing along this path, barring complacency or any further exogenous shocks, the country should be able to ride the tide of economic healing.

Enclosed is a summary of the some of the matters addressed by the Honourable Minister.

Review Snapshot

Public Debt

Up to April 2022

- Due to positive cash flows from the stimulus of the economy, the increasing price of oil and gas along with other factors, our borrowing has reduced
- The Government of Trinidad and Tobago has not borrowed money locally or externally to finance Government expenditure since December 2021
- Public debt is stabilized and now stands at TT $129.8 billion, TT $800 million less than 5 months ago

Overdraft

Up to April 2022

- The Government has an overdraft limit to which it is confined
- Due to improved cash flows, the overdraft level has reduced drastically and is currently at 50% of its limit, compared to the usual 80% over the last few months

Debt to GDP Ratio

Up to April 2022

- Nominal GDP in 2022 has improved and is now estimated at TT$180 billion
- Current debt to GDP ratio is 72% which is 15% less than initially projected in October 2021
- Government can now invest in the productive sectors of the economy to create jobs, economic activity and social stability

GDP

GDP has recovered from a low of TT $140 billion in 2020 to TT $180 billion in 2022, a significant increase of TT$40 billion which is higher than experienced in pre-pandemic years. This is due to the Covid-19 fiscal stimulus plans, economic stimulus plans and programmes of the Ministry of Finance and the Government of Trinidad and Tobago

Budget Deficit

Up to April 2022

- A Budget deficit of TT $5.7 billion was expected at the end of April, however instead a surplus of TT $1.98 billion was achieved
