Improving the performance of your Board

Assessing and improving the governance of your Trustee Board

“You should annually evaluate how effectively the board is performing, referring to the objectives you set in your business plan.”

– The Pensions Regulator, Feb 2018, “21st Century Trusteeship”

Just as we ought to have regular check-ups to take stock of our health, the Pensions Regulator (TPR) expects trustees to run regular effectiveness reviews to evaluate how they’re performing. But, as trustees’ duties and responsibilities continue to grow over time, it can be a challenge to find the time, resource and agenda space to carry out these reviews.

This is where we can help. By bringing together our pensions, audit and assurance experience, we’ve developed a practical, efficient methodology for trustee boards to assess and improve the governance of their scheme. Our approach helps trustees gain a common understanding of what TPR expects from a well governed scheme, distilling the various codes and guidance papers TPR has issued so far.

You can read more about our approach on the following pages.

Key features of our approach:

- Independent, objective facilitation
- Covers and consolidates all key areas of TPR guidance issued so far
- Encourages openness and honesty through reporting results on a grouped, anonymous basis only
- Efficiency as it takes trustees just 30 minutes to provide the input required
- Tried and tested with a range of trustee board and scheme sizes. Also selected as PLISA’s exclusive collaborator (see right)

Improving the performance of your Trustee Board

TPR’s research also shows that board effectiveness extends beyond the operational aspects of running a scheme – the behavioural attributes and dynamics of how the trustees work together are just as important. Yet many trustee board reviews we’ve seen in the market don’t give this area enough attention.

This is why we’ve worked with our alliance partner, Lane4, to develop our approach to board effectiveness reviews. Lane4 are a leading consultancy in the field of human and team performance, and can help trustees measure, improve and have a deeper conversation about how they can work better together. Their approach is customised to the needs of pension trustee boards, and also draws from their wider experience in fields like business, sport, medicine and the military.

The support they’ve provided to various trustee boards has been described as “transformational” and “amazing”.

Some of the ways Lane4 can support trustee boards are listed below.

How Lane4 can support you:

- “High Performing Teams” evaluation (page 4)
- Individual profiling and 1-to-1 feedback
- Skills/personality mapping across trustee board
- Trustee selection
- Observation of trustee meetings & feedback
- Individual coaching
- Workshops

EFFECTIVE GOVERNANCE

In collaboration with

"The Pensions Regulator welcomes the development of tools like this, which provide ways for trustees to assess their current levels of governance and set targets for improvement. As part of our work on 21st Century Trusteeship we would like to encourage trustees to regularly assess their board effectiveness and we welcome initiatives developed by industry to support TPR's drive to improve governance."

– Lesley Titcomb, Chief Executive at The Pensions Regulator

KPMG's governance review

What is it?

A simple but thorough online questionnaire for each trustee to complete. KPMG reviews the results and discusses these in a facilitated workshop with the board.

The questionnaire covers all the key areas TPR has issued guidance on. It helps trustees get a handle on what TPR expects from a well governed scheme, and how they might address any gaps.

What will my Board receive?

- Set-up of secure online governance questionnaire for each trustee to complete.
- Collation and review of results by an experienced KPMG consultant.
- Fully facilitated workshop to discuss results, identify any gaps and agree next steps to address these. We also share insights on market trends and future expectations.
- Trustees receive a report with the results shown on a grouped, anonymised basis.
- ☑ Independent review – removes any conflicts of self-review, and allows the Chair and Secretary to fully participate in the process.
- ☑ Efficiency and flexibility – it takes just 30 minutes to complete the questionnaire, which trustees can do in their own time.
- ☑ Ability to track progress – measurable approach allows tracking through re-assessment after an agreed period.

What other benefits are there?

3 KPMG questionnaire – Components assessed

In KPMG's online questionnaire, we recorded the Trustees' views in seven key areas or 'components'. For some sections, we have also sub-divided each component into smaller sub-components. Further descriptions of these and TPR's expectations in these areas are set out later in Sections 6 – 8.

	Operation of trustee boardTM This refers to the composition and organisation of the trustee board, both on an individual and a collective basis. Aspects assessed include the fitness and propriety of trustees, the effectiveness of the chair, board working practices (e.g. the format and effectiveness of meetings), and trustee training, knowledge and development.
	Conflicts of interest This component looks at whether the scheme has the awareness and effective arrangements in place to manage conflicts within the trustee board, with the employer, and with providers and advisers. Recent research on the trustee landscape shows this is a topical issue and that there are many circumstances that conflicts of interest can arise.
	Scheme managementTM This assesses whether the scheme's governance framework is effective in a) running the scheme in accordance with the law and scheme rules, b) managing the risks in the scheme and c) continuously evolving to reflect good practice as this changes over time. Key aspects assessed include the adequacy of risk management, business planning, audit practices, and the way advisers and providers are appointed and managed.
	Investment governance Trustees retain ultimate responsibility for the scheme's investments. This component considers how well the trustee board manages all matters related to the investments the scheme holds, including any delegated responsibilities and decisions. For defined contribution schemes or elements of a scheme, we also assess whether the choice of investment funds available to members are adequately reviewed.
	Dealing with the employer This looks at the relationship of the trustee board with the employer and how well information is shared and communicated, which can be an influential factor in how the scheme operates. For defined benefit

5 KPMG questionnaire – Your overall scores

The chart below shows the trustee board's scores for each of the seven components assessed (see section 3), and an overall score:

Component: Administration Governance

Trustee boards remain accountable for the quality of the scheme administration and all legal requirements that relate to it. Trustee boards should have a clear understanding of the scope of administrator responsibilities and tasks which they carry out. Trustees should regularly receive appropriate information or stewardship reports from their administrators, to effectively monitor performance and ensure that all tasks delegated to the administrator are being carried out to a standard that, as a minimum, allows the trustees to meet its legal obligations. Trustees should ensure that the data they or their administrator hold is complete and accurate so that core financial transactions are processed promptly and accurately. Trustees should also have procedures to check that the administrators have the appropriate training and expertise, and have procedures to enable a continuous and consistent service in the event of a change in provider or personnel.

Component score	Lowest	Average	Highest
Administration governance	73%	83%	94%

Investment and contribution data are reconciled regularly.	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree
There is a formal process for reporting and learning from errors, so that processes are amended quickly.	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree
The trustees carry out periodic reviews to consider whether any processes can be shortened / made more efficient (for example through improvements in technology).	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree
The trustees have a documented process to ensure continuous service in the event of change of key administration personnel and/or provider.	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree	Agree

Lane4's High Performing Teams (HPT) evaluation

What is it?

An online questionnaire for each trustee to complete, followed by a workshop with a qualified Lane4 consultant to discuss the results and issues arising.

The questionnaire is a diagnostic tool that helps trustees assess the team effectiveness of their board as a whole, such as how the team perceive each other, the sense of leadership, and how they react to changes or deal with difficult situations. It's based on Lane4's High Performing Teams framework, developed from years of research of high performing teams in various fields, and is highly applicable to the trustee board setting.

What will my Board receive?

- Set-up of secure online HPT questionnaire for each trustee, which takes 10-15 minutes to complete.
- Collation and review of results by a Lane4 specialist. Results are presented in a report, shown against the main components of the HPT framework.
- Fully facilitated workshop with a Lane4 specialist to discuss any issues arising and how to improve the performance of the board.
- Workshop can be combined with KPMG's governance review.

What other benefits are there?

- ☑ Measure the "immeasurable" – the HPT framework now gives trustees a way to measure and assess the less tangible behavioural aspects of board effectiveness, such as trust, leadership and engagement.
- ☑ Deeper conversations without confrontation – anonymous and fully facilitated approach gives trustees more confidence to raise difficult or hidden issues.
- ☑ Strengthen relationships within trustee board, through better understanding and appreciation of each other.

HPT Components

Team Emotion refers to how team members feel about each other, and their team as a whole. This determines how they will behave and how effectively the team will perform. High performing teams have high levels of mutual trust. They feel fully engaged with the team, successfully resolve conflict and make superior decisions as a result of capitalising on knowledge held by all team members.

Sub-components: Team Engagement, Mutual Trust, Conflict, Decision Making

Team Mind refers to the 'shared thinking' within the team. In high performing teams, members know how their team works best together. They are able to read new situations and apply existing knowledge. To keep improving, teams need to learn. Through a continual process of action and reflection, great teams acquire, share and apply knowledge.

Sub-components: Shared Mental Models, Situational Awareness, Learning

Team Process refers to what the team does that allows them to adapt and perform at a high level despite changes in the internal and external environment. High performing teams effectively share information, distribute workload and anticipate the needs of the team.

Sub-components: Communication, Coordination

Team Psychological Edge refers to the team's ability to perform in the most difficult circumstances by re-determined and controlled under pressure. These teams determine the direction of momentum when the team is in a dot.

Sub-components: Team Toughness, Psychological Momentum

Team Leadership refers to the formal and informal leadership within the team. In high performing teams, leadership responsibility can be distributed among team members according to the situation and skills of the team.

Sub-components: Vision, Support, Challenge, Shared Leadership

HPT Profile Summary

The following chart shows your team's self-rated capacity for each component of the HPT, whereby 1 indicates a low score and 7 indicates a high score. The table provides details regarding the lowest and highest score provided within the team, as well as the team average. The population average represents the average of a wide range of teams from across a number of sectors. The coloured bands allow you to see what low and scores may look like for each of the components.

Additional services

We also provide a range of other services to help trustees improve their effectiveness, covered below. We recognise that every board is different, so get in touch to find out how we can meet your specific needs.

Individual profiling and 1-to-1 feedback

In addition to the HPT evaluation, Lane4 can carry out personality profiling through an online questionnaire, followed by a 1-to-1 feedback session with a Lane4 specialist. Trustees gain a deeper understanding of their own personality traits, and how they work best as part of a team.

Through this process, Lane4 can also map the overall mix of behavioural qualities contained within the trustee board, helping the chair and trustee board understand what the “sum of the parts” looks like.

Trustee selection

If your board is going through a period of change such as a selection process for new trustees or a restructuring, this is both a perfect and critical time to look at board effectiveness so you're best placed to make the right choices for your scheme's future.

By having a clear understanding of the existing mix of personalities, skills and attributes on the board, we can empower trustees and employers to appoint the right candidates that “plug the gaps” and improve diversity of thought on the board.

Feedback and 360 reviews

No matter how strong or qualified the individuals on the board are, those that adopt regular practice of giving and receiving constructive feedback will adapt and perform better than those that don't. TPR also advocates annual performance reviews with individual trustees.

We can help chairs/sub-committee leads co-ordinate an efficient and independent feedback process. We have an online 360 assessment tool for gathering anonymous feedback on core attributes including leadership, collaboration and performance, giving individuals the valuable, insightful and honest feedback they need to keep getting better.

Scenarios

Scenarios provides an immersive, interactive and memorable experience to bring to life the behavioural dynamics of the trustee board. Perfect for a fun team-building exercise or an away-day.

Scenarios can be used to simulate a decision-making or pressured environment, to test how the board will react and work together. Both pensions and non-pensions scenarios are available.

Observation of board meetings

Both KPMG and/or Lane4 can observe trustee or sub-committee meetings, and provide trustees with valuable immediate feedback. This helps build on and consolidate wider efforts of improving board effectiveness.

Desktop governance review

KPMG carries out a desktop review of the key documentation and governance processes for a scheme. We provide a view on how comprehensive they are, whether they're fit for purpose and working effectively in an integrated way. This can be used to supplement the online questionnaires or be carried out as a separate exercise.

Documents we review typically include: business plan, risk register & internal controls, sub-committee and trustee support working policies, delegated authorities, trustee meeting minutes, training and development plans, conflict policies.

We can also interview key trustees, executive/support functions, providers and other stakeholders where appropriate to form a comprehensive view of how effective and adequate the scheme's processes are.

Frequently asked questions

Q: Is your governance process targeted at DB or DC schemes?

Both – our approach works for all DB, DC and hybrid occupational pension schemes.

We also provide more tailored services to public sector schemes, please get in touch to find out more.

Q: TPR has shared a number of board evaluation tools on its “21st Century Trusteeship” website. What does your approach add?

While the paper-based questionnaires are a good starting reference, a board evaluation is a process, not just a collection of tools. It’s more important to focus on whether the wider review process enables the quality of interaction needed to lead to genuine improvement.

We review our tools and approaches regularly to ensure we more than cover TPR’s latest content. But our approach provides you with much more:

- Time and cost savings – TPR’s paper-based tools require valuable resource (e.g. the scheme secretary or adviser) to manually compile responses. We’ve automated this part of the process, making it time and cost efficient for you.
- Confidentiality and freedom from conflicts – we protect the confidentiality and anonymity of responses received, giving all trustees an open, honest platform to voice their views.
- Inclusivity – where responses in a self-review are typically directed to the Chair, Secretary or Pensions Manager for collation, our process enables all parties to participate fully in the process and receive honest feedback.
- Independent facilitation, challenge and insight – we facilitate the review without bias or pre-conceptions about your board. We’re also able to provide genuine challenge and insight based on our wider experience in working with trustee boards.
- Clear, specific action plan to take forward – the real value in a board review lies in the change and improvement it inspires. We help you develop a tangible action plan that addresses your scheme’s specific development needs.

Q: We’re making some changes to our trustee board. Should I postpone a board effectiveness review?

This is actually a crucial time to look at board effectiveness, as the selection of any new board members (or departure of existing ones) will affect the balance and mix of skills and attributes present on the board.

While assessing some aspects of team effectiveness that may be sensibly held for later, other exercises such as individual profiling and mapping can really enhance the trustee selection process, giving you the data you need to choose (or work with) the candidates that fill the right gaps, and objectively assess what the board needs to improve how it operates.

Given that TPR expects all schemes to carry out regular reviews, trustees should also challenge themselves as to whether any postponement is genuinely short-term and temporary, or if they’re simply kicking a review into the long grass as there may never be “a good time”. For example, some trustee boards we work with stagger their trustee elections so one takes place almost every year – if they postponed their review due to “making changes”, they’d be delaying a review indefinitely!

Q: Our scheme/trustee board is not large, is your approach still suitable for us?

Performing regular reviews is healthy practice for all schemes and trustee boards. We specifically designed and invested our approach (e.g. part-automation) to make our services available and affordable to schemes and boards of all shapes and sizes, not just large ones. We’ve even carried out reviews on sole trustee arrangements.

Speak to us if you’ve got a particular structure or set-up you’d like to explore, we’re more than happy to share some ideas with you and how we might customise a suitable approach for you.
