

Competing with confidence

Healthcare company

New digital technologies are an important route to competitive advantage, but also expose businesses to unprecedented IT risks. So we're working with the internal audit function of a global healthcare company, providing the IT security expertise they need as the business implements a new digital strategy.

We're helping plan an ongoing programme of audits to provide assurance on key IT security risks across the global organisation. We're also providing experts in disciplines such as in cyber security, identity and access management, and mobile device security, to help deliver these audits. With a global network of 2,600 IT security specialists, we've been able to meet our client's requests for expert resources on every occasion without fail over three years.

With our support, our client has access to the resources and expertise they need to ensure the business can capitalise fully on new technologies while minimising cyber and digital risk.

We're on your side, all the way.
