KPMG Annual Review – Transcription

I just had a bit of a natural talent. I'm really competitive. I was 10 years old, and being a 10-year-old I wanted to get involved in everything and I ended up with, on my tenth birthday, a little KX65.

So something that is always quite interesting is to see people's reactions is when I'm dressed like this or dressed going on a night out with the girls or something like that, and actually someone says to me, how can you do motor cross?

There aren't a huge amount of women doing motor cross in the UK. There are some other, smaller, female championships as well but ultimately most weekends I will race against men.

I started at KPMG back in December 2011 in Resource Management. We are constantly battling with trying to find resources. There's been times because of the nature of my job when my phone has gone off at the weekend and I might just be going out on a race.

It wasn't until my later years when I got on the bigger bikes that success started to really come through so for the last few years I've never really been off the podium. Then last year I turned the lovely 30 and my 30th birthday present that year was winning the championships. To top it off last year and to walk away maybe the wrong side of thirty but still be really competitive, still have a career, and still have a really successful hobby, that's really what did it for me.
