

TaxNewsFlash

United States

No. 2022-107
April 4, 2022

KPMG reports: Arkansas (nexus and apportionment); Kentucky (corporate, individual and indirect tax measures); Oregon (source of receipts)

KPMG's This Week in State Tax—produced weekly by KPMG's State and Local Tax practice—focuses on recent state and local tax developments.

- Arkansas: An administrative law judge (ALJ) addressed whether a taxpayer had nexus and receipts apportioned to the state for the 2014-2016 tax years under a Multistate Tax Commission audit. The ALJ first determined that the taxpayer had nexus under the “significant economic presence test” as first articulated in West Virginia v. MBNA and as adopted by Arkansas. With respect to whether the taxpayer had receipts sourced to the state, the ALJ declined to specifically follow the Department of Revenue’s interpretation of the income-producing activity test but agreed that the situation warranted the application of an alternative apportionment method.
- Kentucky: House Bill 8 has passed both chambers of the legislature and has been delivered to the governor for signature. If signed into law, the bill would make significant changes to Kentucky’s tax laws—the most significant being the gradual reduction (and possible elimination) of the state’s current 5% individual income tax rate. Most other tax measures in the bill are designed to raise revenue to help fund the individual income tax cut. House Bill 8 would impose sales tax on 35 new enumerated services effective January 1, 2023, and adopts a new 6% excise tax for the privilege of providing a motor vehicle for sharing or for rent, with or without a driver. Another new tax would apply to entities operating electric vehicle charging stations, and electric vehicle owners would be subject to new fees. In corporate tax news, House Bill 8 would advance Kentucky’s conformity to the Internal Revenue Code as in effect on December 31, 2021. Finally, a tax amnesty program would be implemented from October 1, 2022, through November 29, 2022.
- Oregon: The state’s tax court addressed an issue stemming from tax years when receipts were sourced to the state under the income-producing activity test. The issue was whether certain activities performed by payment acquirers were costs that were counted in determining the taxpayer’s costs of performance. Third-party activity was considered income-producing activity if the activity was of the type directly engaged in by the taxpayer in its regular profit-seeking business and the activity was performed “on behalf of” the taxpayer. Although the first criterion was met, the tax court concluded that the payment acquirers were not acting “on behalf” of the taxpayer.

Read an April 2022 report prepared by KPMG LLP

kpmg.com/socialmedia

The information contained in TaxNewsFlash is not intended to be “written advice concerning one or more Federal tax matters” subject to the requirements of section 10.37(a)(2) of Treasury Department Circular 230, as the content of this document is issued for general informational purposes only, is intended to enhance the reader’s knowledge on the matters addressed therein, and is not intended to address the circumstances of any particular individual or entity. Although we endeavor to provide accurate and timely information, there can be no guarantee that such information is accurate as of the date it is received or that it will continue to be accurate in the future. No one should act on such information without appropriate professional advice after a thorough examination of the particular situation.

The KPMG name and logo are trademarks used under license by the independent member firms of the KPMG global organization.

KPMG International Limited is a private English company limited by guarantee and does not provide services to clients. No member firm has any authority to obligate or bind KPMG International or any other member firm vis-à-vis third parties, nor does KPMG International have any such authority to obligate or bind any member firm.

Direct comments, including requests for subscriptions, to Washington National Tax. For more information, contact KPMG’s Federal Tax Legislative and Regulatory Services Group at + 1 202.533.4366, 1801 K Street NW, Washington, DC 20006-1301.

To unsubscribe from TaxNewsFlash-United States, reply to Washington National Tax.

Privacy | Legal