United Kingdom – Publication: Implications of Ending Portugal's Non-Habitual Residents Regime

KPMG LLP in the United Kingdom has released an online publication on the Portuguese government's announcement regarding the end of the Non-Habitual Residents regime¹ from 1 January 2024 onwards.

See "The end of an era: Portuguese Non-Habitual Residents regime to end" (30 October 2023).

This publication discusses the impact of this change (from 1 January 2024 onwards) and what this might mean for U.K. resident non-U.K. domiciled taxpayers.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Individuals considering relocating to Portugal will no longer be able to access the special tax regime, unless they meet the relevant conditions and hold a valid residence visa as at 31 December 2023.

This may mean a more burdensome tax situation for employees relocating on assignment to Portugal in future and higher assignment costs for their employers.

KPMG LLP (U.K.) INSIGHTS

This announcement was made as part of the Portuguese government's State Budget Law Proposal for 2024² and, although not yet definite, is highly likely.

The changes could impact taxpayers from jurisdictions other than the U.K. with plans to relocate to Portugal.

If taxpayers (and their employers) believe they may be affected, they may wish to consult with their qualified tax professionals, KPMG's Global Mobility Services team in Portugal (partner and country lead Sandra Aguiar (saguiar@kpmg.com)) or, where relevant, a member of the tax team with KPMG LLP in the U.K. (see the Contacts section).
