Japan pre-entry Tuberculosis \(TB\) screening

Japanese immigration authorities introduced mandatory TB screening for nationals from specific countries seeking medium- to long-term stays in Japan. Initially applicable to Nepalese, Filipino, and Vietnamese nationals, the requirement will later extend to Chinese, Indonesian, and Myanmar's nationals. The screening pertains to those entering as "mid- to long-term residents," excluding reentry permit holders and individuals engaged in digital nomad activities. Certain groups, such as specified skilled foreign workers, nurses, and care workers under Economic Partnership Agreements, and foreign students in designated programs, are temporarily exempt from the screening mandate.

Changes to the Accredited Employer Work Visa \(AEWV\)

Government of New Zealand announced that starting from 10 March 2025, New Zealand's AEWV will undergo changes following reforms announced aimed at benefiting industries facing recruitment challenges. The adjustments will no longer require employers to meet a median wage threshold when hiring migrants under the AEWV or seasonal Specific Purpose Work Visa policies. Instead, employers must adhere to the New Zealand minimum wage. Other modifications include reducing the work experience requirement for migrants to two years, enhancing engagement with the Ministry of Social Development, extending visa durations for less-skilled workers to three years, and raising the income threshold for supporting dependent children. Additionally, certain roles will be reclassified to align with the National Occupation List skill levels.
